Subject: Change in PGE IRP Roundtable Format and Facilitation

Dear IRP Roundtable Participants,

Our partners are foundational to our IRP Roundtables. We have been very fortunate to have significant participation from various stakeholders throughout our 2023 IRP planning process. This stakeholder participation and feedback is a pillar of our IRP development. Our Roundtables are the trusted path for engagement with the technical modeling and analysis needed to identify future long-term resource needs, the resource options for meeting those needs, and PGE's proposed action plan to ensure a safe, reliable, affordable system. This year, our IRP Roundtables are evolving to address new analytical needs and perspectives to equitably decarbonize our system in support of our Clean Energy Plan and associated requirements of HB 2021.

Recently, we have gotten feedback from multiple stakeholders that our IRP Roundtables no longer serve their intended purpose of driving an inclusive space for all participants to engage in our resource planning processes.

We value the insights and feedback of all our partners and will be establishing operating agreements and meeting norms to ensure our Roundtables are a trusted and useful source of information for all who choose to participate.

Starting in our November 2022 Roundtable, we will begin using a facilitation process. Our goal with facilitation is to share airtime between participants and ensure that presenters can move through the scheduled agendas on time.

Participants can expect the following:

- Each subject matter expert will present all of their information before taking questions.
 - Attendees are encouraged to type questions into the chat during the presentation
 - Attendees are encouraged to “thumb up” questions to indicate they'd like a response to a question in the chat prioritized
- We will now have a meeting facilitator, who will read questions from the chat for presenters to respond to
 - We will reserve time at the end of each presentation section to address questions and comments
 - If all questions are addressed there will be time to take verbal questions
 - If we don't have time to cover all questions, we will respond with answers after the workshop.

This process and our facilitation will evolve over time and we welcome feedback on the process to help us improve the experience for everyone. We truly want this to be a space where everyone can learn, contribute, and participate.

Thank you,

Kristen Sheeran
